

Dear colleagues,

The GHEP-ISFG invites you to participate in the XXVIII Annual Meeting on Forensic Genetics that, on this occasion, will be held in Cartagena, Colombia, from July 26 to 28, 2023. Several training courses will be offered in the area of forensic genetics which will have the participation of international experts for two days during the Meeting.

As hosts, at the University of Cartagena, we extend a warm invitation to everyone. We hope that we manage to meet your expectations and that this is the stage to strengthen our ties of friendship and future collaborative work.

It is also an excellent opportunity to get to know the beauty and historical legacy of Cartagena, a port city located on the Colombian Caribbean coast. Within its heritage, there is a magnificently preserved colonial zone, famous for its castles, culture, history and color, labyrinth of cobbled alleys, balconies covered with bougainvillea and huge churches that cast their shadows on tree-lined squares. In this historic center is where the Cloister of La Merced is located, the current venue for this Meeting.

Stay tuned for the information that we will make available to you through the GHEP-ISFG website - <https://ghep-isfg.org/en/meetings/jornadas2023/>, and I hope to see you soon in Cartagena.

Beatriz Martínez

Instituto de Investigaciones Inmunológicas
University of Cartagena,
Local Organizing Committee
jornadadegeneticaghep@gmail.com